

JONESBOROUGH, TENN .: Friday, December 22 1865.

LAWLESSNESS IN NASHVILLE.

The Nashville papers teem with chronicles of crimes that are nightly perpetrated in that city. The gambler, thief, garroter, murderer and incendiary ply their infernal vocations, heedless of their immediate hazards, or the retributions of violated law .--They defy the most artful schemes of detection and apprehension, and to an alarming extent escape the utmost vigilance of the police. There is no laugh. surety for life-a meagre chance for limb, and no compassion for pocket-

It is an a centure of applauded boldness to appear upon the streets after night-fall, and he is esteemed the blessed of fortune who "meet up" with no Plag-Ugly demonstration at personal expense in his nocturnal

Church going people are attacked and rifled, on their way to and from their places of worship. The physician on his errands of relief to the afflicted, comes in damaging collision with a slung-shot or bludgeon, and is uncerimoniously relieved of his pocket encumberances. The lawyer is throttled and divested in a twinkling of his subsidies from the same graceless villians to prolong their carnival

The young lady spends a busy hour in her boudsir, arranging her toilet to the most advantageous showing off of her charms, and momentarily expects the entrance of her suiter. The stipulated hour of coming has been tolled by the gilded chronicler of time, and still the inanimate deporations of the drawing room are the only spectators of her dazzling equipage. The noticed hours drag wearily into the far spent night, and she retires in the anguish of disappointment, with an humbled estimation of her suitors worth-

The next morning, papers explain the cause of the broken engagement, by a paragraph something like the following: About 3 o'clock last evening Mr. A was knocked down on street, by a shoulder-hittor and robbed of his watch and greenbacks. At this writing, his recovery is considered doubtful. And so we might continue the catalogue of crimes ad infinitum.

The readers of the Nashville press would infer that the Capitol is a casspool of the congregated viciousness and depravity of the whole State --Nashville once had an enviable fame for her quiet and honest minded citlzens and their general observance of commenced to execute. Col. Bravo. law! Now, she is almost as disreput of the Liberal party, has arrived at table for deeds of lawlessness and violence, as Paris for the sanguinary Twenty-five thousand men are under scones of Thermidor.

The shipwreck of law and order in | 000 will be speedily raised. Nashville is not astounding to any one cognizant of the number of pernicious " institutions" that are in full blust tion are tolerated upon almost all the eirects. Auxiliary to these destroyers towards the military arm of the Fe-of the tranquility and safety of the nian Brotherhood, through which community, are the brigands and desperadoes, who mastered the science of robbury, house-breaking, arson and murder in the rebel army, and have flocked hither to reap, under the auspices of police inefficacy, the profits of dier who directs the military affairs of disciplined villainy.

Governor Brownlow, has appealed to the Legislature to devise measures to deliver the city from the scourge of lawlessness, and in the event they lo nothing in the matter, military force will be resorted to. The righteous despotism of the bayonet will onet the nuisances and pests of Nashwille, and produce a happy reverse in William Galbraith, the tide of her general affairs.

ENT of Lt. Gen. U. S. Grant, with several members of his start, part through this place on last Sanday morn-ing, stream for Westington city. He was returning from a tour through several of the Southern State. At Journborough, where the traffs stops for support, the At Jourahorough, where the train steps for support the General was introduced to Dr. Sevier, a prominent citizen of the place, who introduced thin to a large crowd who were in waiting to catch a glimpse of the "great nanker." A general shaking hands took place—Among the crowd was ene who had fourist pretty hard on to their side, who, while hobbing up to the General romanicalt. "I fought that man pretty hard, but I would like to see him." The General answered, "That does not to see him. The teneral answered, "That does not keep you from being a most citizen I had as soon see you see you're mean this state would recognize tils fact, and act accordingly, we would soon have quite a different state of affairs." We copy the above from the Bristol News, and as it periains to a matter of our locale, it "becomes our province as a journalist, to propagate truth and expose error." Those who were present at the reception of Gen. Grant, will readily perceive the fingrant migropresentation ser forth by the News, editorially. The "one among the crowd" who " hebbled up" and desired to equalty the State is in quasi rebullion, | see Gen. Grant, happened to be at or side, and was no less a personage than the venerable W. Atkinson, Esp'r. of this place, then whom to truer Union man doesn't mulgated, for the especial benefit of that class of people designated by the laws of the land as "traitors." N. D. By the above correction we do not court a per. sonal embroglio, but state facts, which, if rebutted, weare prepared to meet, not forgetting who fiddled for the grontost dancer in modern raspality.
